HONGRONA, MAY 20TH, 1:87.

In another column we reproduce an article from the China Overland Trade Report which throws out the idea that the revision of the Treaties with Japan will be followed by a demand on the part of China for a like revision in her case. That such a demand will order, the initials as well as the surnames he preferred sooner or later there can be no doubt, but it will be long before the West-The MAPS and PLANS have been mostly ern powers will be found ready to surrender their existing rights. Not that exterritoriality is in itself an advantage to those who enjoy it; on the contrary it is an evil to be got rid of as soon as possible and all parties will rejoice when China has made such an advance in the adoption of modern ideas and the administration of. justice that the exterritorial rights of European powers may be safely surrendered. But China does not advance with leaps and bounds like her more sprightly neighbour, and she has scarcoly yet entered on the path along which Japan has been hurrying at such a rapid rate for years nast. Consequently the time is not ripe yet for seriously entering on the subject, though the Marquis Tsong bas sounded a note of warning in his recent paper. It is essential to the safety of foreigners in China and the Scales of Commissions and Charges adopted by protection of their interests that, until many radical changes have taken place which will require years for their accomplishment, exterritoriality should be maintained to its full extent. JAPANESE TREATY REVISION.

The Treaty Revision Conference in Japan has come to an end for the present with the settle ment of the principles on which the revision is to be conducted. We particularly direct attention to the erasure in the manuscript as undesigned evidence of au thenticity, and should any questions be raised as to the body of the letter being in another handwriting, we shall be prepared to adduce proof that this peculiarity is quite consistent with its genuine character. The body of the letter occupies the whole of the first page of an ordinary sheet of stout white note-paper, leaving no room in the same page for the signature, which is placed on the fourth page near the top right-hand corner. It was an obvious precaution to sign upon the back instead of upon the second page, so that the balf-shee might if necessary be torn off, and the letter disclaimed.

It is right and necessary to explain that the Doar Sir is bolieved to be Egan and that the letter was addressed to him in order to pacify the wrath of his subordinate instruments in the Phonix Park murders—then (on May 15, nine days after the tragedy) still at large and undetected. The anxiety of the writer to keep his address unknown will be noted, and is curious in connexion with a belief prevailing at the time that Mr. Parnell was so impressed by the danger he had incurred by denouncing the assassinations as to have applied for the protection of the police on the plea that his life was in peril.

Mr. Parnell in this letter describes Lord F. Cavendish's death as an "accident," but he " cannot refuse to admit that Burke got no more than his deserts." That is his language to the " Inner Circle," but before Parliament, yielding to what he considered "the only course," or as it stands amended in the text "our best policy," he spoke on Monday, May 8, two days after the murders,

Mr. Parnell said he wished to be permitted to express, on the part of his hon. friends, on his own part, most unqualified detestations of the horrible crime which had been committed in Ireland. (Hear, hear.) He could not now refer to the steps which the Govergment proposed to take. He did not deny that it might be impossible for the Government to resist taking measures such as had been mentioned by the that the crime had been committed by mon who absosociated (hear, hear), and who had dovised that crime and carried it out us the deadliest blow in their power against his hopes and the new course which the Government had resolved upon.

P. arrived here yesterday from Massewah, and who having been in Khartoum during the whole period of the siege, was well acquainted with the circumstances attending the fall of that city, and the subsequent proceedings of the Mandists. "This man's statements were given in a manner which inspired confidence in their veracity, and I venture, therefore, to draw your lordship's attention to the principal points in his narrative.

"It appears that Christo Agha, who is a Syrian Greek by birth, went to the Soudan some 12 years ago as a trader, but shortly before the outbreak of the rebelli n he enlisted in a regiment of Bashi-Bazouks at Kharioum, in which he eventually held the rank of Duluk-bashi (captain). He was at Khartoum at the time of General Gordon's arrival, and remained in the city till about six weeks after its fall, having saved his life by professing Islamism, when he escaped in company with several others in a similar position, and, by travelling at night, got to Gadarif in safety; thence he pushed on to Kassala, and eventually got down to Massowah.

"I closely questioned Christo Agha on the subject of these persons to see if I could obtain from him any details which might lead to their identification. I did not, however, meet with much success, for, as he said, they being all dressed and armed precisely like the Mahdiist troops, there was nothing in their appearance or habits sufficiently striking to be remembered after the lapse of several months. He was, notwithstanding, able to give me a fair description of one of them, who may, I think, not improbably be Mr. Vizetelly. He described him as a short, stout man, with a full beard, and (be thought) wearing glasses, adding that he was an artist who had accompanied Hicks Pasha's expedition to make skolches for a newspaper, and that he had escaped the massacre of the army by having been, through an accident, left some way behind the troops. I should be glad if some one could be found who, being personally acquainted with Mr. Vizatelly, could state whether this description tallies in any way with the appearance of that gentleman."

But he added that there was certainly a resemblance in the upper part of the features and that he thought that the photograph was that of the Euglishman.

" Mr. Alburt Vizetelly may rest assured that no effort will be spared to obtain the release of his father and of the other Europeans now detained at Khartoum. But I am very sorry to be obliged to add that at the moment I do not see much hope of obtaining their release.- I have,

Rénée stipulates that she shall be his wife only in name. He is a widower and has a son, and as the play progresses Rénée falls in love with this son. The father suspects his wife's infidelity, his own sod, who, to further complicate matters. He visits Rénée in her bed-room to acquaint her the door. The son escapes into an adjoining Patna (New) closet. The father enters, pistol in hand. Then | Benares (New) there is a scene in which the father remarks what a dreadful thing it is that his wife should dishonour him just as his son is going to marry "Miss Ellen"-a wealthy haiross. This disclosure of her lover's inconstancy is too much for Rónée, who walks to the closet door, puts her hand on the look, and says "Yes, I have a lover: there he is." She throws open the door, and father and son are face to face. The pistol falls from the father's hand, when, swift as thought,

These photographs will be according to the system of the brothers Houry, photographers to the Paris Observatory. Their negatives will be subjected under strong light to powerfully magnifying microscopes, which enable the eye to detect thousands of stars in parts of the sky where only hundreds have yet been discerned. M. Flourens, Minister for Foreign Affairs, in his inaugural speech, thanked the foreign astrothem by the Directors of the Paris Observatory. Referring to the work before the Congress, which consists in deciding on the best means to obtain an exact chart of the heavens, M. Flourens said that, thanks to the marvellous applications of photography, it would be rich in unforeseen results. The unknown stars thus revealed would, he affirmed, be innumerable. It would be an enternal glory for the members of the Congress I to have inaugurated that grand enterprise; therefore he was certain the opening day of the Congress would be one of note in the annals of science. Before concluding, M. Flourens promised the Congress the cordial support of the French Ministry, and expressed the conviction that all Governments would aid in the achievement of the grand work, as they were all animated by a noble emulation for the development
